“Direct interaction between constituents and Members of Congress and elected representatives remains a vital ingredient of democracy. For young people especially, it is an important learning tool and often an introduction to representative government. For Members of Congress it is a way to stay in touch with young constituents and hear their perspective firsthand on the issues important to them. I always look forward to personally meeting with my constituents, including those participating in NAEA’s Day on the Hill.”
